A living material in your hands, shapes that grow through layering, a gesture that builds volume and identity. Here, ceramics take shape through coiling, an ancient technique that allows for direct, precise, and profoundly material work.

Guided by Mariangela and Roberto, you will enter a refined ceramics studio in Milan, a space meticulously designed for focused, high-quality work. After a brief introduction, you will begin to build your object starting from clay coils, layering and progressively shaping them until form and structure are defined.

During the experience, you will work with carefully selected materials in a professional setting guided by an instructor with a consolidated artistic background. Not just a simple lesson, but a more conscious creative moment where technique and sensibility meet.

What makes this experience special

- Experimentation with the coiling technique, precise and still underexplored
- An elegant ceramics studio in the heart of Milan
- Carefully selected, professional-grade materials
- Guidance from an instructor with a structured artistic background
- An experience closer to artistic practice than a basic lesson
