Between moss, soil and slow gestures, Kokedama tells the story of one of Japan's most fascinating botanical traditions. Born from an ancient artisanal technique and later becoming a symbol of balance and natural harmony, this suspended garden transforms plant care into a creative and meditative experience.

During the workshop, guided by an expert host, you will learn how to shape your own Kokedama using draining soil, natural moss and traditional binding techniques. You will discover the meaning behind this practice inspired by Bonsai philosophy and create an elegant botanical composition to take home with you.

In an intimate and relaxed atmosphere, the workshop offers a genuine moment to slow down, work with your hands and reconnect with nature in a simpler and more harmonious way.
